Campus Recruiting Team
[Bank Name]
[City, State]

Dear [Bank Name] Campus Recruiting Team,

I'm a sophomore at [University] studying finance and economics, and I'm applying for the 2028 Investment Banking Summer Analyst position in your Industrials group. Over the past two months I've spoken with three members of the group. A call with [Associate Name] about how the team runs a sale process for a family-owned manufacturer is why this group is my first choice.

Two things from those conversations stood out. First, most of the group's sale work comes from founders selling the company they built, often to a private equity firm. That's the side of the table I want to learn from. Second, [Analyst Name] told me she drafted sections of a confidential information memorandum in her first month and sat in on management meetings by her second deal. I want that kind of early responsibility, and I'm ready for it.

Two experiences have prepared me for the work:

Last summer I interned in the finance department of a regional HVAC distributor with about $40 million in annual revenue. I rebuilt the monthly margin report in Excel by product line. It showed that two product lines were losing money once freight costs were included, and the CFO used my analysis to reprice both.

As a sector analyst in my school's student-managed investment fund, I built a three-statement model and a discounted cash flow valuation for a publicly traded industrial company. I pitched it to the fund's board, which voted to add a $15,000 position.

Both taught me to find the number that changes a decision and to defend it in front of someone more senior.

Thank you for considering my application. My resume is attached, and I'd welcome the chance to talk about how I can contribute to the Industrials team in Summer 2028.

Sincerely,
John Doe
